As a reader, you are one of the real managers of the Hearst organisation. The convention, there-fere, interests you.

It is putting it mildly to say that the Hearst publishing enterprise is from every point of view the biggest in the world.

Ask any other publisher who

The circulation of Hearst's daily newspapers exceeds 2,377,- circulation of Hearst's Sunday newspapers is more than 2,513,000.

2,513,000.

The circulation of the Hearst magazines is more than 2,751,000.

And the cheapest of them sells for twenty-five cents a copy.

Hearst publications go into more than five million homes in the United States and into the hands of at least twenty-five million peo-

United States and into the hands of at least twenty-five million people in the United States.

There is no such circulation, no such possibility of useful publication anywhere else in the world. One fact interesting to you as a reader is this: In every city, in every publishing office controlled by Hearst there is constant growth and more rapid now than ever before.

You judge of the influence of a group of publications by the amount of money that the public pays in a year to buy those pub-

Next to Hearst's publishing oncern, the greatest in America that of Mr. Curtis, of Philadelphia, able man, possessing suc-cessful periodicals and extremely interesting newspapers.

The GAIN in circulation receipts, which means the amount the public pays for them, of Hearst publications in 1919, as compared with 1915, is more than the TOTAL circulation receipts of the Curtis organization.

In 1919, the public paid in cash for Hearst publications thirty-two million dollars, about three times what they paid in 1919 for the publications of Mr. Curtis, nearest competitor.

Hearst's Chicago morning news-paper, the Herald and Examiner, paper, the Heraid and Examiner, typifies the present growth of Hearst publications. In the circulation statement that all newspapers must make under oath to the Government, the last made on September 30, shows that the Heraid and Examiner gained more than TWICE as much as all its competitors combined. That is to say, the increased circula-tion of the Chicago Herald and Examiner was more than TWICE the combined circulation increase shown by the Chicago Tribune, the Chicago Daily News, Chicago Evening Post, and the Chicago Journal.

The Hearst newspapers are successful in a business way, as well as in circulation and influence, although desire for profit is not their mainspring.

In New York City, Mr. Hearst has, in the Evening Journal, the most powerful, as well as the most profitable newspaper in the world. If you wish confirmation of this statement ask Mr. Ochs, able owner of the New York Times. Waked out of a sound sleep, he could tell offhand just what all the important papers of the country are doing.

The convention of Hearst publishing executives, which began yesterday, is interesting because Hearst managers come in direct, constant contact with at least one-quarter of the population of the United States. If you lived in China, Africa, or on Mars you would be inter-ested in a small group dealing with one-quarter of all the in-

The payroll of the Hearst organization, which does a business of about seventy million dollars year, answers one question asked by young men in schools of journalism. "Does newspaper journalism, work pay?" In the small room where the Hearst executives met there were a number of newspaper workers with annual earnings greater than the salary of the President of the United States, and two at least twice as well paid as the Students of journalism must not fix their minds on filthy lucre, but it will do them no harm to realize that, in modern journalism, working for your readers the general public is profitable financially as well as spirit-

With all respect for human nature, you cannot help observing that efforts made by Hearst newspapers to serve the public were imitated more widely in this country AFTER the Hearst newspapers began making money and paying editors more than anybody else. the preliminary stages, when Hearst was pumping millions rapidly from his private pocket into his newspaper business, there was less enthusiasm about imitating

This was decided upon today by the ommission and was agreed to by both the operators and miners. A request for such a decision was made by the operators. The operators today informed the commission they would not agree to any price fixing arrangement after the expiration of the Lever act.

They stated that they had been adised by attorneys that they could not enter into any agreement which would fix prices after the expiration of the ever act and intimated that the comnission does not have such power. The original demands of the bitumious coal miners for a 60 per cent ocrease in wages, a six-hour working day and five days a week, were re-stated by John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers, before the President's Coal Commission This action took place mediately after an agreement had been reached between the commission, the operators and miners that the final award would constitute a new vage contract.
